Patrick is such a doll

Ryan Seacrest gave Grey's Anatomy hunk Patrick Dempsey a surreal souvenir: an action figure inspired by the star's dashing character, Robert Philip, in the movie Enchanted. "It's a wonderful likeness, don't you think?" joked Patrick, who walked the red carpet with his wife, Jillian, who's a makeup artist. FYI: While the doll has Patrick's thick locks, it's a bit shorter than the 5-foot-10½ McDreamy!

The most popular place for bling? In the hair, of course!

EXTRA-FANCY GRIPS
Hilary Swank secured her French twist with $38,380 Chopard earrings. "It was raining, so they helped hold her style in place," said Suave celebrity hairstylist Luke O'Connor.

IMPROVISED PIN
Kudos to Kristin Chenoweth for adding a Fred Leighton brooch to her updo. "It made her hair more elegant," said O'Connor. "It really dressed up her simple bun."

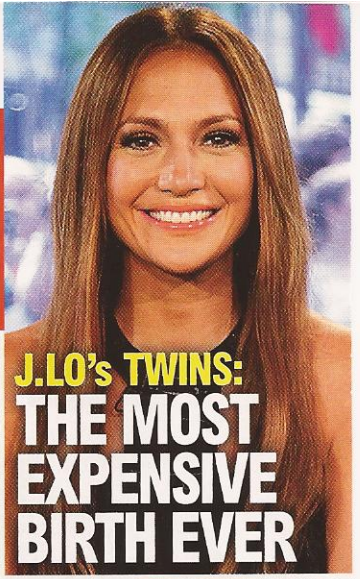

STATEMENT PIECE
"It's the most expensive hairpiece ever created," E! News fashion commentator Kimora Lee Simmons said about her million-dollar hair pin by Natalie K.

HOW YA BEAN?

George has never been sweeter

George Clooney is used to making fans' mouths water during his romantic films, but this is ridiculous! The Jelly Belly gourmet beans company — using 10,000 jelly beans. The amazing likeness — which uses Cotton Candy-flavored beans for his cheeks and Buttered Popcorn for the highlights in his hair — will be donated to charity after it spends some time on display at Jelly Belly's Oscar gifting suite at Beverly Hills' Luxe Hotel.

SCREAM DREAM

It's a lo-o-o-ong way down!

Years in the making, the "king of roller coasters" finally opened at Chimelong Paradise park in Guangdong, China. More than 30 stories tall, the Swiss-designed ride, which is the only "diving coaster" in Asia, can reach up to 74 miles per hour on the dizzying 90-degree drops. Chinese officials also say the coaster, which seats 30 people at a time, is also one of the world's most expensive — it cost more than $28 million to design and build.

Oprah Winfrey

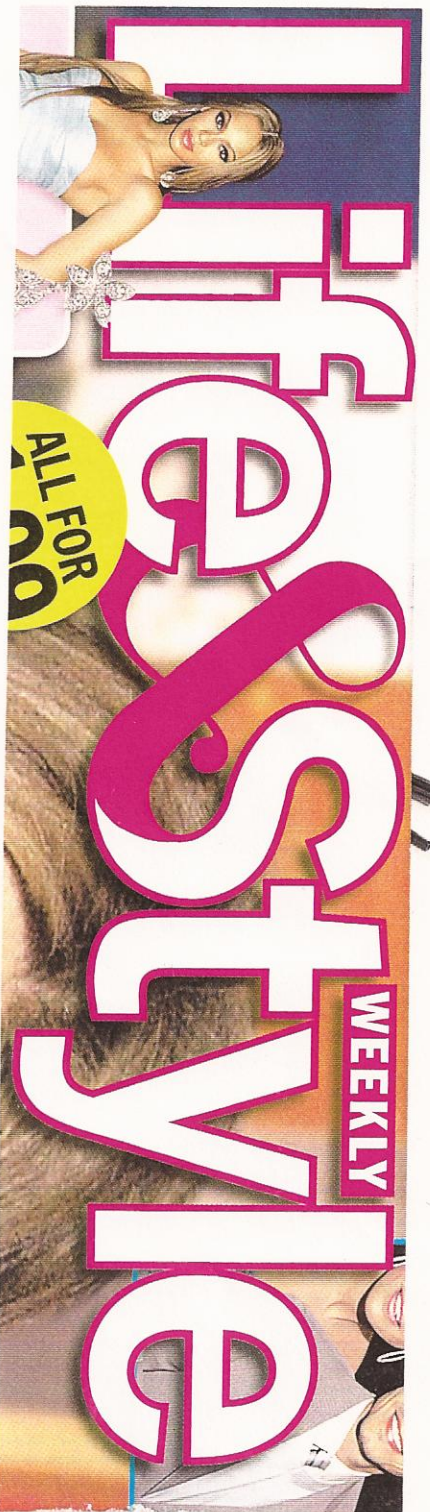

Oprah, pierced!

Ms. Winfrey declined most offers at a pre-Oscars gift suite, saying, "I really don't need anything." But when Mikimoto heard that the talk show queen had just had her ears pierced, they insisted on giving her a pair of pearl earrings. "This is my first pair of real pierced earrings! I've been wearing clip-ons the whole time!" said the delighted diva.

Like Oprah's pearl earrings! Mikimoto; $9,900, 888-701-2323

Diamonds Around the Neck and Even on the Shoes

BY GINIA BELLAFANTE

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 29 — Perhaps it was fitting in a year when hobbits, seafarers and a racehorse dominated much of pre-Oscar conversation that the Academy Awards should feel less like a fashion-centric girls' night out. Most of the gowns faded in memory just after their wearers moved on from their red-carpet chat with Joan Rivers.

But who will forget Johnny Depp's bow tie, obscured by a shirt collar the size of a table napkin? Or the director Peter Jackson's floppy oversize suit and loose tie, looking as if stopped somewhere between the closets of John Belushi and a University of Vermont physics professor.

The 76th Academy Awards were marked by the return of the red carpet, foreshortened last year when the Oscar ceremony coincided with the start of the Iraq war. The ostentatious displays of excitement returned. It became acceptable once again for fashion commentators to get woozy over diamond-encrusted Lucite shoes (offered by Stuart Weitzman, worth about $2 million and worn by Allison Krauss during her musical performance) and for hairdressers to make grand proclamations in advance about the viability of various red carpet styles.

"Dead straight is dead gone, and pony tails are for the gym," said Etienne Taenaka, the salon director for Vidal Sassoon, who styled heads at the Chateau Marmont in West Hollywood on Sunday morning. Mr. Taenaka visited Jude Law to do the hair of Mr. Law's mother and the actor's girlfriend, Sienna Miller. ("Jude doesn't really do anything to his hair," he said.) On his way he stopped to chat with a representative from Aureore, an Australian jeweler
